

Every community with a health care organization wants to be able to count on the fact that services provided are excellent and offered at a competitive price. Each community wants the provider to operate well, for not only does it provide a vital service to the community, it is also a major employer. Great health care organizations equal a healthier community, in more ways than one.

What Does This Mean to the Community?

- Better access to care for patients
- Better place to work for employees
- Healthier community
- Better place for physicians to practice medicine

Equals:

- High-quality care at a competitive cost
- A community that has a positive workforce at a major employer (healthcare)